Waste Dive: Recycling

Weekly edition | July 10, 2019

Lawsuit over Keurig coffee pod recyclability moving forward

The company had hoped a California judge would dismiss a complaint claiming its "recyclable" labels are misleading.

Q&A

Local governments may have more recycling power than they realize

Neil Seldman of the Institute for Local Self-Reliance has long been a proponent of grassroots policymaking. He shares examples of cities and counties taking the lead on glass, organics and more.

Oregon governor signs laws banning plastic bags, straws

Legislation signed by Gov. Kate Brown last month is the latest in a series of statewide plastic reduction measures to pass this year.

Boston casts wide net for organics options, including in-sink

The city's first move on its "zero waste" plan indicates large-scale ambitions. Two new RFPs for curbside food and textile collection also serve as a reminder of current budget constraints.
